Did you know that California and the Los Angeles Metropolitan area are ranked #1 nationwide for highest employment levels for Logisticians and Transportation, Storage & Distribution Managers?

Did you know that the annual mean wage for these professions is $91,400?

Supply chain management typically begins with acquisition of raw materials and ends with delivery of final goods to customers. Managers must be able to communicate, negotiate, and coordinate events with business partners and service firms. Info and distribution management are also important aspects of this job.

Supply chain managers oversee and organize activities involved with the identification, acquisition, production, and distribution of goods that companies provide to customers.

Los Angeles Harbor College, Business Division

Please register for Bus 130 online for Spring, 2014 at www.lahc.edu. If you'd like info on textbooks, etc., add your name to the list at: http://tinyurl.com/m4kf8kr. You will be contacted soon.